

The Legal Issues Related to the Education of Undocumented Students

No topic that impacts schools and their students is more in flux today than that of undocumented children. This workshop focuses on both federal as well as New York State law and provides participants with the most up-to-date legal requirements for school districts as they educate their undocumented population. Topics include requirements to educate undocumented children, rights of undocumented children to participate in extracurricular activities, requirements of school districts to respond to Immigration and Customs Enforcement requests, and school district responsibilities to assist students whose parents have been detained by Immigration and Customs Enforcement. This workshop is a combination of lecture, discussion, and group hypotheticals and includes an expert guest speaker to address local experiences and effective strategies.
