

Preventing Workplace Harassment – Part 2: Investigating and Interviewing

When a claim of harassment is brought to the Title IX Officer, the ensuing actions often determine whether there is a positive outcome. The investigation and interviewing phases related to these cases are often complex and challenging. This course helps participants develop a plan for a thorough investigation of a harassment case. Participants will learn techniques for interviewing the claimant, alleged perpetrator, and witnesses that result in gaining the needed information to come to an informed decision about what transpired and what next steps are necessary.
